My Dream Guest House, Northern Thailand

Whether you arrive in Chiang Rai by plane or bus an additional longtail boat transfer is needed to reach the My Dream Guest House. During the almost one hour boat ride, it is all about relaxing and enjoying the river, while the city turns into rice fields that turn into beautiful mountain formations along the Mae Kok River.
There are a lot of expectations when one chooses to call his guest house “My Dream Guest House”, but the house lives up to its name. “My Dream Guest House” is located in the far north of Thailand, more specifically in Chiang Rai, which is a three-hour drive north of Chiang Mai. You will be welcomed by the owner Nan, who runs My Dream together with his wife and two children. After placing yourself in an armchair on the terrace, you will suddenly feel very far from everything. In fact, it might be difficult finding anything more authentic and real in Thailand than this place and this area in general. Luxury here does not consist of room service, swimming pools, minibars and air conditioning. You can experience this elsewhere in the Kingdom. Luxury at this place is great nature and cultural experiences, which Nan is excellent at conveying. Still you will find everything you need in the riverside bungalows that we always try to book. They are clean and neat with a good bed with mosquito netting, a fan, hot and cold water and a terrace with a river view. That is all you need. The restaurant always has cold beer/water and a nice menu put together by Nan, who is also a master of making good sandwiches and tasty Thai food. There is even a computer with internet that occasionally works. Out here wi-fi is unknown. The jungle area is inhabited by numerous tribes, each with their own characteristics and traditions. Nan is from the Karen tribe and you will not find anyone better to tell you about their cultural customs.

Nan is the guide on most of the trekking trips whether it is by foot or a one-day trip in his worn-down but loyal red jeep.

On trekking trips you can normally choose between one or two days with an overnight stay with a tribe. The trips are of course adjusted to whether there are children and how far you can manage to walk. Nan takes pride in the trips, making sure they take place in areas where you normally will not meet other tourists. The villages that are being visited do not see many tourists. We are “off the beaten track”, which is why the trips are often unique and different each time. This only makes the trips more authentic. However the following are typically on a trekking trip:

Lots of water. It is hot in the jungle and you are usually soaked in sweat from the humidity. The reward, however, is the incredible scenery; a stunning flora, enormous trees, a few formidable-looking but quite harmless beetles, spiders in several variations and perhaps a herd of cows crossing the path. At the end of the long path you’ll enjoy the view over the river, the villages and the tribal people working in the fields, which in these latitudes are sometimes rice fields. All the sweat is then worth it. And if there are children, parents will often be surprised how far their children can walk, when it is fun.

The visits to the various villages are mandatory and their primitive way of life may leave you speechless. One feels set back 100 years when you see women sitting by the pot over the fire, while the pigs are running around, grunting beneath the tree house. Perhaps poor but by no means discomforting or depressing, although different. It is in these surroundings you stay overnight on the two-day trip. It is simple mattresses with mosquito nets. The toilet is a hole in the ground, but it is an experience of a lifetime.

The one-day trip is usually varied with driving by jeep/car, riding on an elephant and wandering through the jungle. You will typically be driven down to the elephant camp further down the river. The next couple of hours is on the back of one of these enormous creatures through a beautiful part of the jungle. It is a fantastic experience observing the gracefulness and strength of the elephant in its own natural habitat. It doesn’t get much better.

The last stop is at the village of the Lahu tribe. Lunch is prepared here and sometimes you will get to eat with members of the tribe. From here it is about a two-hour walk through the jungle before reaching a waterfall and a much needed shower. You can swim right under the waterfall and the pressure is gentle enough that all sizes can take part. The last part of the trek is usually by car. If time and weather allows it, we will visit two other hill tribes; the Akha and Lahu tribes. After a short walk back late in the afternoon, you can enjoy a cool beverage on the terrace.

On the one-day trip the impressions and perhaps the experiences will be the same as on the two-day trip. But during the two-day trip you have the time and solitude to digest the experiences. It happens naturally when sitting outside your bamboo hut in the primitive Lahu village, where you will spend the night. Absolutely nothing happens here. But the eyes will never rest, as there is always something to look at; the old father sitting in the doorway in his colorful sarong with something that looks like a cigar, the shy local kids trying to sell you a bottle of water, litters of filthy piglets chasing their sow to get some food or a chicken trying to whip up a crowd. All the while, the locals will be unaffected and unstressed while doing their chores. Fortunately, Nan is really good at answering questions and offering information – including about his cooking, which you are welcome to watch.

Between the penetrating calmness of the village and being filled up from experiences, you will sleep well, despite it not being the most comfortable overnight stay in Thailand.

During the two-day trip there is about four hours of walking in the jungle interrupted by a couple of hours of lunch in a village. You are welcome to help with the food, if you like. On the second there will also be about four hours of walking. Waterfalls and elephants are scheduled on this trip as well. At the end there will be a short ride down the river, where you will get the opportunity to swim at a hot spring. We are back at My Dream Guest House before nightfall.

River trip, tea plantations and the Golden Triangle

On the last day of your Northern Thailand adventure, you will get some of the most beautiful experiences in the country. The trip starts, as soon as you arrived in Chiang Rai; in a long-tailed boat. We continue up the river from My Dream Guest House. It takes about 90 minutes up to Tha Ton, depending on the current of the river. On this stretch, you will see an even more breathtaking landscape than on the trip from Chiang Rai. The mountains begin to almost move in across the river. It is soothing for the eyes sailing through this truly astonishing area before we end up in the town of Tha Ton, near the Burmese border. Here, Nan will be waiting with a minivan.

Two kilometers later, you will arrive at a temple area on a hill, overlooking the entire Tha Ton area and a slice of Burma. This will not be the final view of the day. The next couple of hours, the drive is gradually getting more and more beautiful. Suddenly tea plantations appear and we are eventually so high up that it is good to know we are heading back down, because it can get cool in the evening.

Mae Salong is a very special and interesting city. The majority of the city is Chinese after a group of Chinese people in ancient times discovered that the steep slopes were very suitable for growing tea.

We eat a light lunch at a guest house with an incredible view over the tea fields. We continue driving through the mountains until we reach the Mount Bo area. There are some excellent outlooks into Burma from here. The area has occasionally been dangerous with frequent grenade killings on both sides, as a result of the civil war in Burma. Currently there is a ceasefire, although still several military checkpoints. It is not dangerous.

After driving down the mountains, we end up in Mae Sai; Thailand’s northernmost point. A busy border town populated by Chinese, Thai and Burmese people, looking to sell legal goods, as well as contraband, transporting them across the river border after dark. We will look at the goods, but there is very little buying as no one ever really needs a machete or a five kilo bag of almonds.

From Mae Sai it is about one-hour’s drive to the Golden Triangle, where Burma, Laos and Thailand meet. If you would like, there is time to visit the Opium Museum, showing the history of what the area is also known for; opium cultivation and trade.

We relax with a cup of coffee along the Mekong River, where we have a view of Laos. Last on the list is the trip to Chiang Rai Airport, where it is time to say goodbye to Nan. There is time set aside to have dinner – best at the airport restaurant on the 2nd floor. Then we departure to Bangkok again.

Fantastic trekking in Umphang (6 days / 5 Nights)

Umphang trekking – perhaps Thailand’s best trek (6 days/5 nights)

The trek leads us through the jungle to the 400 meter tall waterfall; Tee Loi Su, Southeast Asia’s highest. Here you can take a dip to cool off, if the weather allows it. The sounds and scents of the jungle accompany us on the trek through bamboo groves, dense vegetation and across rivers. We make a stop to stay overnight in the Karen village; Kho Ta, where you can get a fascinating insight to the culture and life of the tribe. From here we continue through the unbeaten jungle. The Umphang trek is primitive but very much in harmony with nature and the local people.

Day 1: Bangkok – Maesot:

Departure will either take place by the VIP luxury bus from Bangkok to Maesot, or we can arrange a minivan transport all the way to Umphang and return for an extra fee of 12000 THB. Either way, remember to bring a warm sweater, as the air conditioning can get cold. Arrival early next morning by 5 am.

Day 2: Maesot – Umphang:

In Maesot we will be picked by the bus and drive to Umphang in a public songthaew (a half-open pickup truck) together with the local travelers. It is a very beautiful 4-hour drive through the mountains and 1219 curves! The highest point of the drive is 1400 meters above sea level. In the evening you check into the traditional stilt houses, where we will have dinner on the porch and meet the guides providing us with a brief review of the trip. (B, L, D)

Day 3: Bamboo-rafting and trekking:

After breakfast we get on the bamboo-raft (or an inflatable boat in the rainy season – depending on the water level) and head south along the Mae Klong. The river changes speed depending on the season. Here you can sit and relax and enjoy the scenic surroundings. Along the way we stop at a hot spring, where you can bathe. We recommend that you keep your camera equipment in a plastic bag and have your sunscreen, hat and sandals ready for the sailing trip. It is about four hours of trekking from here to the public campsite in Umphang Wildlife Sanctuary, where we have permission to camp. Please note, this is the toughest uphill trekking day of the trip. (B, L, D)
Day 4: The Tee Loi Su Waterfall – Trekking to the Karen tribe village:

We will start in the morning walking to the impressive waterfall Tee Loi Su; Southeast Asia’s largest. It is most beautiful right after the rainy season (November-December). If the weather is nice enough, you can take a dip in the natural pools at the foot of the waterfall. The place is also a popular destination for Thai people, so be prepared for many people in the high season. After lunch we hike through large bamboo groves, over bridges and through dense jungle to the Karen village, Ko Tha. We will spend the night in a traditional house on piles built of teak and bamboo. You can walk around the village and get a sense of the Karen tribe and their daily lives and way of living. The guide can tell you more about their culture and traditions. (B, L, D)

Day 5: Umphang to Mae Sot – Trek through the jungle in the morning before heading back to Mae Sot

In front of you is 3 hours of trekking through the jungle and over a small hill to Palatha. Here your transport back to Umphang is waiting for you. When back in Umphang you can take a shower before heading back to Mae Sot. In Mae Sot a short rest and dinner will await you, before you board the overnight aircon bus back to Bangkok unless you choose to end your trip in Mae Sot. (B, L, D)

Day 6: Bangkok

Expected arrival on the Northern bus station Mochit early morning around 05.30 AM. The tour ends on the bus station and you will have to get to your next destination yourself.

Overnight stay:

Practical information: You will stay sometimes in stilt houses and sometimes in tents on the trip. Sleeping bags and mats are available in Umphang. Pack a small bag with essentials for the jungle – remember, you have to carry your things yourself. The rest of your luggage will be stored in either Bangkok, Maesot or Umphang. Please note: The program is subject to change. Weather conditions can also cause the program to change. The trip will be completed at a minimum of 4 people. If you decide to go on your own, you must choose a day, when other people are registered. Note that the trek is harder in the rainy season with a lot of rain and muddy trails. In an emergency, it may be necessary to move part of the trek on to the dirt track. In the interest of the conservation of nature and your enjoyment of the trip, we aim to trek in small groups of two and eight participants. Many of the guides are from Umphang and have grown up with the jungle, therefore their English skills are often limited. Difficulty: Easy – moderate (depending on the season). Suitable for families. Be aware that the trek is the hardest during the rainy season from July to October. Remember to get travel insurance, as participation in trekking and trips is at your own risk. If you cannot or will not carry your own baggage, you can hire a carrier.

Daily departure.

Remember:

- Comfortable walking shoes/boots and sandals for the rafting trip
- Light and quick-drying shorts and t-shirts to trek in
- Warm sweater/fleece for the mountain drive in the songthaew and for the evenings
(December-February)
- Light clothing with long sleeves and legs for the evening (mosquitoes)
- Mosquito repellent and personal medication
- Your own sleeping bag or sheet bag (optional) (down to 8 degrees at night in the winter months)
- Rain cover and rubber boots during the rainy season (can be borrowed locally)
- Long socks for hiking in rubber boots during the rainy season
- Swimwear and hat/cap
- Flashlight and batteries
- Towel, toiletries and waterproof sunscreen
- Camera equipment and optional waterproof bags
- Money (remember it is typical to tip the guides after the trip)
- Passport (If necessary, shown at border posts on the Bangkok-Mae Sot trip)
- Copy of passport for the trekking trip (passport can be left in Mae Sot/Umphang)
- An inflatable pillow and motion sickness pills (optional)
- Earplugs (optional) (in the villages there can be noisy chickens and dogs at night)

Not included in the price:
- International and domestic flights
- Beverages
- Tips for the driver and guide (we recommend min. 400-500 THB per person for both guide and driver)
- Personal expenses such as laundry, souvenirs, beverages, camera/video fees, etc.
- Any services not listed in the program
Tour Golden Triangle - 3 days/2 nights excursion in Northern Thailand

3 days/2 nights Tour around Golden Triangle in Northern Thailand
The trip is designed with a good balance between relaxation and activity. You will experience a lot in the three days, but there is still plenty of time to relax, to enjoy a swim in the pool and enjoy wonderful Northern Thailand – an area that by many is considered one of the most beautiful areas in South East Asia. This is a tour that the whole family will enjoy.

Itinerary

Day 1: Chiang Mai – Tha Ton

In the morning the guide will pick you up by minivan at your hotel in Chiang Mai. We head north and after an hours drive we arrive at an elephant camp in Chiang Dao. You have the opportunity to ride through the jungle on one of the giant animals. The length of the trip is approximately an hour and a half. Next, we will leisurely sail on a raft down the Ping river – back to square one. An unforgettable experience.

After having dinner at a good nearby Thai restaurant, the next stop is “The Caves of Chiang Dao”, one of Thailand’s largest cave areas. It is said that the caves reach 12 kilometers into the mountains. Even for those not wanting to enter the fascinating caves, the short trip there is still worth taking.

A long drive later we arrive to the resort in the afternoon.

Day 2: Tha Ton – Chiang Saen

After a nice breakfast and maybe a morning dip in the pool, we get onboard a long-tailed boat on the Kok River. The luggage is brought by minivan and will meet us later.

First we sail a bit west towards the the Burmese border, which is marked with a rope hung across the river. Then we sail east towards Chiang Rai. An extremely nice and calm boat ride with a constant view of the mountains in the horizon. Within a few hours we arrive at one of the Karen villages, halfway to Chiang Rai. The minivan picks us up here.

While we slowly drive north one spectacular view is being replaced by another.

The mountain drive is absolutely stunning and we make small breaks whenever the view is most beautiful. We also stop at some of the Karen villages en route.

When we stop next, we have reached Thailand’s northernmost point, Mae Sai. Mae Sai is a melting pot of different tribes; Thai, Karen and Burmese. It is a border city, where everything imaginable is being sold.

It might be more unusual than beautiful here. We offer a quick trip into Burma for about one hour. In Burma the poverty is obvious compared to the more developed Thailand.

In the afternoon we drive towards Laos and soon we arrive at the mighty Mekong River and the Golden Triangle. We drive along the Mekong River and end up in the town of Chiang Saen, where the lovely resort is waiting.

The resort consists of nice spacious rooms and a great view of the Mekong River and Laos on the other side.

Day 3 Chiang Saen – Chiang Rai

After breakfast at Serene we make a short drive to the area where Thailand, Burma and Laos meet. The area is called the “Golden Triangle” and it originates from the lively trade of opium which took place in the region. Do not expect to find opium dens, because the production and trade have since moved west to Afghanistan and Pakistan. We settle with a visit to the Hall of Opium – a museum that tells the story.

We then drive further to even more beautiful sights along the Mekong River. We follow this scenery for a long time along the river to the city of Chiang Khong. We have a good local lunch before we head towards Chiang Rai, arriving early afternoon.

We are going to experience the beautiful temple, Wat Rong Khun, also known as the White Temple. There will also be time to get an impression of Chiang Rai before heading to the airport, where the plane will bring you to new adventures in Bangkok.

The trip includes:

- Private transport by car/van/bus
- English speaking guide
- Elephant trekking (additional charge)
- Opportunity to visit Burma or a Laotian Market
- Local hill tribe visits – Karen
- Overnight stay by the Mekong River
- Long-tailed boat ride on the Kok River – one of Thailand’s most beautiful stretches
- Visit the Hall of Opium – a great museum
- The White Temple in Chiang Rai
- 1 night at the Maekok River Resort or similar quality accommodation
- 1 night at Serene Chiang Rai or similar quality accommodation
- 3 x lunches
- 2 x dinner
- 2 x breakfast

Not included in the price:

- International and domestic flights
- Beverages
- Tips for the driver and guide (we recommend min. 300-500 THB per person for both guide and driver)
- Personal expenses such as laundry, souvenirs, tips, camera/video fees, etc.
- Any services not listed in the program

Remember:
- Light clothing with long sleeves and legs for the evening (mosquitoes)
- Mosquito repellent and personal medication
- Swimwear and hat/cap
- Towel, toiletries and waterproof sunscreen
- Money (remember it is accustomed to tip the guides after the trip)
- An inflatable pillow and motion sickness pills (optional)
